Fundraisers who have collected thousands of pounds for charity, the founder of an arts festival and a couple who have served the city's Jewish community for decades are among the Norwich folk recognised in the New Year Honours list.

They joined the likes of ice dancers Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean, actor Idris Elba and comedian Matt Lucas in receiving honours.

These are the people from in and around Norwich named on the King's New Year Honours list:

Peter Barrow, who co-founded The Autumn Festival of Norfolk in 2010 is made an MBE for charitable services to the community.

The annual festival features events showcasing the work of artists, musicians, dancers and writers from across the county.
